HEART ATTACK FATAL TUESDAY

John A. McCurdy, Steelton druggist, who began his career in Gettysburg more than sixty years ago in a drugstore operated by Harry Huber, located on Chambersburg street, died from a heart attack Tuesday night at the home of his daughter, Mrs. S. S. Zimmerman, 402 Pine street, Steelton.

Mr. McCurdy was born in Eldersville, Washington county, in 1858. He came to Gettysburg at the age of 17 when he entered the employ of Mr. Huber, a relative. While here, he received his education as a pharmacist.

He went to Steelton in 1889 and established a drug store at 7 South Front street. After a few years the business was removed to larger quarters nearly opposite the old address. The business was then taken to the large store room in the Steelton Trust company building at that place.

He conducted the business at that location until April, 1926, when he sold it to its present owner, and retired.

He was a trustee and a member of the sessions of First Presbyterian church at Steelton and served as secretary of its Sunday school for twenty-five years. He was a member of the board of directors of the Steelton bank and trust company.

Surviving him are three sisters, Miss Margaret, Miss Belle and Mrs. Ella Pendel, who are residents of Toronto, Canada, and are now spending the winter in Florida; a brother, Wilbur E. of Burgettstown, and two daughters, Mrs. Zimmerman, and Mrs. John E. Worthington, of Bel Air, Maryland.

Mr. McCurdy was married to the former Miss Annie M. Wills, daughter of Judge Wills, Gettysburg, in a double wedding here in 1889 when Miss McCurdy's sister, the former Miss Jennie Wills, became the bride of William P. Quimby, of Philadelphia. Mrs. McCurdy died in 1926.

STATE IS FIRST IN SANATORIA

Annual Campaign Against White Plague Directs Notice To Work In Pennsylvania.

In every section of the state, anti-tuberculosis agencies are active in the renewed battle against the white plague. In this connection it is timely to call attention to the work that is being done by the Pennsylvania state department of health, declares Dr. Theodore B. Appel, secretary, in the matter of care and cure of tubercular patients.

Pennsylvania ranks first in state owned sanatoria for the treatment of tuberculosis. That is not only true in November, 1931 but it has been true for many years. These sanatoria—three in number—are well known to the public, and are located at Mont Alto, Cresson and Hamburg.

Typical Camp
Mont Alto with 885 beds is a typical camp for ambulatory cases only. It is located high in the Blue Ridge, where all the forces of nature can be utilized and allied with the forces of medical science in the treatment of men, women and children who have contracted the dread disease.

Cresson, on the top of the Alleghenies, with 720 beds, is a mixed camp and hospital, also ministering to tuberculosis in incipient stages, or treating those who are a social menace owing to their contact with children. Here, too, sunshine, mountain air, and high altitude are utilized to aid in the battle with the disease. There is a waiting list of more than 1,000 patients listed for these two institutions.

Bed Patients Alleviated
Hamburg, located some 65 miles northeast of Harrisburg, with 540 beds, is equipped solely for bed patients, and the waiting list here is practically as great as the capacity of the institution.

From the waiting list patients are admitted in rotation, and in accord with county quota, preference however being given to cases where there is a greater opportunity of effecting a cure, or affording more or less permanent relief.

Visiting nurses of the department of health, county medical directors, and organized clinics with these field forces cooperating, keep the patients in close and constant touch with all sections of the commonwealth and its tubercular patients.

County Prepares to Observe Thanksgiving; Warm Weather Continues as Holiday Nears

Football Games, Annual Festival Board, Church Services Attract.

With weather prevailing here the day before Thanksgiving that has brought trees to bud for a second time this year and has persuaded robins and bluebirds to remain long after summer is officially over, temperatures cold enough to whet local appetites for the turkeys and side dishes galore which go to make up the annual Thanksgiving feast, have been promised by the weather man for tomorrow.

Thanksgiving Day in Adams county is the annual homecoming day for many families when relatives from far and near return for the holiday feast, while there was a general exodus today from the local schools as college and academy students returned to their homes for the Thanksgiving holidays.

Business Houses Close
All places of business will be closed for the holiday including the postoffice, the stores and the banks. The restaurants and hotels are preparing for the annual seasonal rush and festive dinners have been announced by many local cafes and hostilities to keep the tradition of fine menus alive on the one truly American holiday.

Many Gettysburgians will leave early Thanksgiving Day to root for two local football teams which will play their last games of the season tomorrow away from home. Followers of Gettysburg college football will go to Lancaster en masse to cheer for the Men of Bream as they meet their traditional foes on Williamson field tomorrow afternoon, while rooters of the Gettysburg high school will go to Lebanon to give Coach Martin's Maroon and White squad moral support in its final contest.

25 Bushels Spread Over Lincoln Highway As Two Vehicles Meet.

Twenty-five bushels of apples were scattered over the Lincoln highway, a half mile east of here at 11:45 o'clock Tuesday evening, when two trucks collided. No one was injured, but damage to both machines was estimated by a local state highway motor patrolman at $850.

The trucks were driven by Herbert Brown, colored, Coatesville R. 2, who was taking a load of 125 bushels of apples from the Troxell orchard, near Fairfield, to Philadelphia, and R. D. Johnston, of Aurora, Ohio, whose machine was loaded with nine tons of miscellaneous freight, destined for Cleveland.

Brown was accompanied by Samuel Seidman, Philadelphia, owner of the truck, and Johnston had Howard Dale, a relief driver, with him. Johnston's truck was said by Brown to have been over the center of the highway, but the Ohio man denied this.

GILBERT TO PLAY IN BACKFIELD

Russell Gilbert, a product of Gettysburg high school, will start in the backfield for the Bullets when the Orange and Blue is sent into action against Franklin and Marshall, at Lancaster, Thanksgiving day. Gilbert's showing during the past ten days has been so impressive that Coach Bream has decided to start the young back in the most crucial test of the 1931 campaign.

Al Jones, another utility backfield ball totter, will also start for the Gettysburgians. Jones has improved considerably during the past ten days and has won the coveted assignment of starting against the highly rated Possums of Coach Holman's supervision. Hardy, fast-stepping, plunging fullback, and "Dutch" Eby, flashy star from Harrisburg, will comprise the remainder of the quartet. Eby will direct play, calling signals for the Bullets.

Eden, another Gettysburg boy, and McCarty will be at the end positions. Seely and Stoner will be at the tackle berths. Captain Santaniello and Murgard will be the guards with Renshaw, former Perkiomen prep star, at center.

Local followers believe this is the strongest lineup the Bullets have welded together this season.

Tonight the Gettysburgians dine at the Hotel Gettysburg, attend the Majestic theatre as guests of Fred E. Walters, manager, retire before ten o'clock, breakfast at the Hotel Gettysburg at 8:30 Thursday morning and then leave by bus for York where they will lunch before proceeding to Lancaster in time to dress for the opening whistle at 2 o'clock.

MANY CHANGES PROPOSED BY YOUNG GOVERNOR

Philip LaFollette Would Give Government Outright Control Of Some Business.

Madison, Wis., Nov. 25 (AP)—Governor Philip F. LaFollette in a message to a special session of the Wisconsin legislature Tuesday proposed far-reaching social and political changes, including "direct control and ownership by the people" of some business enterprises.

The youthful governor addressed a session called to meet unemployment relief and other problems. He advocated appropriations totaling nearly $17,000,000 for unemployment relief and strict regulation of hours of labor to create jobs. He suggested enactment of a compulsory unemployment insurance law, to become effective in 1933, unless industry voluntarily establishes unemployment relief systems.

For Steep Income Tax
The governor proposed increases in state income taxes ranging up to thirty per cent on large incomes. He advised the legislature to impose a tax on chain stores and a one per cent tax on the cash income of corporations. An "intelligent and courageous use of the taxing power" was suggested to bring about a measure of equalization in incomes.

"I am fully aware," Governor LaFollette told the legislators, "that the program here recommended challenges the monopoly system at its foundations. I know the power of that system. I know what it can do to the public and even the private lives of men who challenge it. I know the attacks—subtle, open and under-cover—to which every one of you will be subjected. You will be assailed. You will be called Bolsheviks and anarchists and other names that come into the minds of the hired men of the system. Your only reward will be the inner satisfaction that if you are successful you will have helped to remake the life of America."

FINAL PRACTICE FOR TURKEY DAY

Maroons In Trim For Final Game Of Season At Lebanon Thursday.

Coach Eugene Martin will give his Gettysburg high school football squad its final practice of the year this afternoon in preparation for the wind-up game with Lebanon high at Lebanon Thanksgiving day.

A record crowd is anticipated for this game. Both teams possess brilliant records for the current season which should result in a thrilling battle. Many fans are planning to follow the team to Lebanon while the Maroon and White band will also make the trip.

Gettysburg's lineup may be slightly changed for the final fracas. Welly Plank, husky center, is suffering from a bruised hip and may not be able to start. Coach Martin has been grooming Wade Carlson, end, at the snapper-back post and it is likely he will get the call if Plank does not round into condition.

Another change may take place in the backfield. Johnny Riddlemoseer looms as a probable starter in Trostle's position, the latter having a wrenched back. However, Trostle is expected to get into the game.

No less than seven regulars will be playing their final games for high school. Dick Smith, veteran fullback; Bern Anthony, tackle; Jim Robert, end; Jim Dickson, end; Wade Carlson, end; Welly Plank, center, and Chick Rupp, halfback, will make their last appearances in Maroon and White moleskins.

Lebanon will present a powerful array of veteran players. The Red and Blue team has turned in some notable victories this season which makes it a favorite but like all traditional games, this will mean little when the teams line up for the kick off. Victory in this game will give the locals their best record in nine years and would also be sweet revenge for the setback sustained at the hands of Lebanon last year.

Coach Martin's lineup will probably include: Dickson and Robert, ends; Kuhn and Anthony, tackles; Shearer and Deardorff, guards; Carlson or Plank, center; Riddlemoseer or Trostle, quarterback; Rupp and Jones, halfbacks, and Smith, fullback.

Lebanon's Red and Blue team will probably use Wise and G. Smith, ends; Steckbeck and R. Kendig, tackles; D. Smith and Johnson, guards; Ditt, center; White, quarterback; Light and Rank, halfbacks, and Holstein, fullback.

The high school squad will leave at 10 o'clock Thursday morning, traveling by bus. After lunch in Harrisburg, the squad will proceed to Lebanon shortly before game time and will go directly to the field. The game is scheduled for 2 o'clock.

Refuses To Give Her Testimony In Court

Refusing as the commonwealth's witness to repeat the story of an alleged assault upon her as she previously had related it to her father, a magistrate and a grand jury, a 14-year-old girl Tuesday was held by Judge Watson R. Davison, of the Franklin county courts, for contempt of court.

The court placed her in the custody of a deputy sheriff to be taken to the Chambersburg police headquarters. He stated that she was to be held in the detention room there until disposition is made of her case.

Judge Davison asserted that the witness had been tampered with and added that he intended to find out who influenced the girl to change her story.

As a consequence, the case was not pressed and the defendant, Irvin Austin, of Picketown, near Waynesboro, was discharged by Judge Davison "with very great reluctance."

Austin was accused of assaulting his sister-in-law, Elsie Brenneman, of Waynesboro, last May 15, while she was keeping house at his home. W. F. Brenneman, the girl's father, was the prosecutor.

SAYS TRUCK WAS USED AS WEAPON

Declares Deliberate Attempt Was Made On Lives Of Federal Agents.

Lancaster, Nov. 25.—Two federal prohibition agents were injured Tuesday when an alleged beer-running truck crashed against their automobile on the Willow street pike.

The injured men are Richard Fitzgerald, 34, and Edward C. Malloy. The other agents, R. G. Barry and John Seemiller, escaped injury. All four are attached to the Philadelphia office.

Solomon J. Simons, assistant prohibition administrator, said reports to him indicated "the driver of the truck deliberately crashed into the agents' car in an effort to force it from the highway."

"Apparently this is the work of a Lancaster beer-running ring," Simons said, "and the government will start an investigation in an effort to bring charges of attempted murder against the driver of the truck."

The agents said they chased the beer truck half a mile and when they blew several blasts on a police whistle, the driver diminished the speed of the truck, but when the agents drew up to the side of the truck the driver put on speed and headed the truck against the automobile and jumped. The driverless truck pushed the automobile into a ditch at the side of the road.

AMUSEMENTS

At The Majestic

George Arliss, who will be seen at the Majestic theatre Thursday in Warner Bros. "Alexander Hamilton," upon completion of the filming, signed a new contract whereby the actor is to remain under the Warner Bros. banner for three years. There is an optional clause whereby the producers may retain his services for two additional years. Mr. Arliss collaborated with Mary Hamilton in the writing of "Alexander Hamilton" which had a successful run on the stage in New York and London.

Joe E. Brown, now at the Majestic theatre for one day, in "Local Boy Makes Good," his latest National starring vehicle, is noted for the quickness of his repartee. One of his stories which illustrates this rare gift has to do with a long argument in which he engaged with certain producers, as to the salary to which he felt himself entitled. His rather hot retorts to his antagonist caused the latter to say jocosely, "By the way, how did it happen that you got such a big mouth?" Said Joe E. without a second's hesitation, "I got it arguing with producers about salary, and I don't want to stretch it any further!" It might be said that Joe won for he is now known to be well satisfied with his present contract.

Tanker, Members of Crew and 5,000 Cases of Liquor Seized

New York, Nov. 25 (AP)—After firing a round of shots over the heads of sixty men engaged in unloading 5,000 cases of liquor from the oil tanker Raritan Sun Monday, federal prohibition agents closed in, seized the liquor, confiscated the tanker and arrested the men without resistance. The tanker was warped at Bushey's dry dock, Brooklyn.

Customs officials valued the liquor at $350,000 and the vessel at $200,000. Eight trucks also seized were valued at $50,000.

Says Owners Cooperated
The Raritan Sun is a 533-ton vessel owned by the Sun oil company, Charles R. Innis, maritime executive of the Sun oil company, Philadelphia, said the seizure of the tanker was the "result of cooperation between the federal government and the Sun oil company." He added that the owners of the vessel were working with the government to prevent members of the crew from transporting liquor.

RAILS READY TO CUT ALL WAGES

If Workers Fail To Act, It Is Said, Presidents Will Go Ahead.

New York, Nov. 25 (AP)—Prominent railroads of the nation, as represented by the eastern presidents' conference which met in New York Tuesday, virtually presented an ultimatum to all union workers that wages must be voluntarily reduced within the next few weeks or formal action would be taken to forcibly bring about such reduction. Meeting at the Bankers' club, thirty-one rail officials, under the chairmanship of L. F. Loree, president of the Delaware and Hudson, decided to give the brotherhoods a "last chance" to cut their own pay checks. In other words, the railroad heads agreed to take no further action in the wage matter until the meeting in Chicago December 8 of 1,500 representatives of union organizations.

10 Per Cent Cut Essential
It was stressed, however, that wage cuts averaging at least ten per cent all along the line were absolutely necessary to save the carriers from the economic morass and that there was "considerable hope" these reductions would be voluntary on the part of the workers. The Chicago meeting, it was concluded, will answer the question of whether there will be a battle between employers and employees or a "peaceful economic acceptance of the situation."

F. W. Leamy, secretary of the eastern conference and vice president of the Delaware and Hudson, following the meeting, expressed the consensus which he said prevailed among the officials present.

To Await Workers' Action
"The simple facts are," he said, "that the presidents today decided to suspend any further action on the wage matter until the meeting of the brotherhood chairmen in Chicago on December 8 has a chance to consider and vote on the question."

"How they will act on the question of voluntarily reducing their wages, at least temporarily, we do not know. There has been considerable hope expressed, however, that their action will be favorable for the roads and that there will start in the near future a general decrease in pay rolls."

"If the workers do not realize the distress of the carriers and understand that wage reductions now mean life or death to many of our roads, then the railway officials will immediately begin formal proceedings to obtain the relief which is a prime necessity for the existence of their lines."

Frosh, Seniors Win In Soccer Matches

The inter-class soccer games conducted at Gettysburg college this week Tuesday afternoon in a victory for both the senior and freshman classes and losses for the sophomores and juniors.

In the first game the seniors defeated the team representing the sophomore class 4-0 in an easily contested game. The senior aggregation kept punting the ball down the field with much spirit, while the second year men evinced a lack of confidence.

The third year men met defeat in a more closely fought game with the freshmen by a 2-0 score. The two teams played very good soccer but the juniors lacked scoring punch. The freshmen proved their ability at the game an displayed much spirit. The first year men gave much promise that soccer at Gettysburg will be a success within the next few years.

The remaining games of the competition to decide the champion team will be played in the near future, the exact date of which has not yet been announced.

LADY with a PAST

By Harriet Henry

SYNOPSIS: Popularity, which Venice Muir has longed for, is valueless to her because of Drake Farrelly's indifference. She has sponsored rumors of European conquests to gain the interest of New York society. Drake judges her by this reputation. She encourages and then refuses Roland Wainwright, to pay off an old insult.

Chapter 40

VENICE PUTS OUT FEELERS
"Because I don't love you," Venice told Rollo.

Rollo opened the front door. "You're a little fool," he snapped as though he almost pined for her. The door shut behind him. "I am really," said Venice to herself. "But not the kind of a fool Roland Wainwright thinks I am."

Her mouth twisted in a wry little smile. A crisp golden January gave way to a February that was primarily bleak and grey. Leadens skies reflected Venice's most prevalent mood.

With the dawning of Roland Wainwright from her scheme of things her gaieties took on a simpler, more natural trend. There seemed less artificiality about her futility edging in the whirlpool of social activities. This intangible touch of stability gave her new ease, but vitality was still lacking in this freshly acquired popularity. She could not explain it to herself but she went about with an inner wistfulness that was poignant and nagging.

The courses at Columbia became bright beacons to which she eagerly looked forward. They shone with actual warmth through the gnawing emptiness of her dun-colored days. The English literature class every Thursday evening interested her but the short story course gave her genuine stimulation.

Sullen February slipped into a biting March of irritable winds and occasional rain and sleet. Her mood again depicted by the weather. What had become of Drake Farrelly? On entering each party her eyes went this way and that in vain search for him. Repeated walks in the park brought her no sight of his slim figure and easy swinging gait. She looked up his address in the telephone book and one Sunday took a bus to Tenth Street and wandered through it in the hope that he might emerge from his doorway as she passed. She walked quickly on the opposite side of the street. It was a small brown stone house with boxes of stunted firs in the windows. A small girl with a black bob cut in a straight fringe across her forehead came to the window to press a snub nose against the pane. It must have been his younger sister. Venice hurried to Sixth Avenue and then retraced her steps briskly back to Fifth again. Her eyes discreetly stole towards the brown stone house as she went by. The front door opened and a short elderly gentleman with white mustache and patches of white hair showing at the sides of his derby hurried out. Drake's father. He was like an older Drake, neither tall nor short, but, unlike Drake, inclined to be rosy and rubicund.

Venice boarded an uptown bus, feeling something of a fool. What was the matter with her? Was this love? You couldn't be in love with someone you had talked to but two or three times who put forth no encouragement or real sign of interest in your behalf. She was probably merely piqued because she wanted him for a friend and could not have him. That was human nature. Withheld fruits, she must be ridiculous. She turned Drake Farrelly from her low thoughts and forced her mind to busy about a new idea for a short story. It was going to be about a Kit Chase sort of person.

In the course of the next few weeks she put a few tentative wires towards getting in touch with Drake. She felt that she must tell him something if she could brace up the opportunity. Oddly enough she wanted him to know that she was not a flake. Not at Guy as her paid escort, the meek, painstaking manufacturer of Phil's past. He would be shocked and disgusted no doubt but it might in the long run do him good. He had no right to be so. It would be lovely to confide in someone and perhaps Stat's could make him understand. She had a confession after a long, deep, buried sin. He was not truly interested in her anyway so there was nothing to be lost.

During with Donny Reese at the time one evening she asked suddenly, "What's become of Drake Farrelly?" Her tone was casual, indifferent. She eyed the dancers as she spoke, as though they were of no main interest in life.

Drake Farrelly, speculated Donny. "Don't know him." His Yes, you do. A friend of the good adys. Don't you remember him Mrs. Goadby's dinner for Lola a couple of months ago?" "Oh, yes, a pleasant sort of chap, but I never see him anywhere," he said. "Let's dance," smiled Venice. "Any had become a real friend of son's. Although you couldn't show Mr. the inside of things that really was interested he was comfortable and easy to be with.

Her next attempt at contact with Drake was tossed carelessly at Lola. Rain was dropping great, teardrop-shaped tears down the windows and an unhappy wind was blowing outside. The two girls sat in Lola's bedroom and it was the friendly sort of afternoon that they had so often enjoyed before Venice had become a lady with a past.

"Let's have some contract one night this week," Lola said idly.

"Let's," agreed Venice, and then craftily, "Why don't you get Drake Farrelly? He plays an excellent game."

"Oh, you call him?" "My Godfrey, you're not turning shy again, Venice, after your resurrection?"

"No. But I don't know him so very well. Go on, Lola."

Lola telephoned Venice that evening that Jerry had asked Donny Reese instead.

Oh, God, thought Venice, and snapped the receiver into place.

There was no way she could manage it. Drake Farrelly might as well be wiped from her slate of the present and relegated to her pigeon-hole of pleasant memories. And she did so urgently want to tell him everything. Be herself just once since she had come home from Europe at any cost.

But she couldn't shove him so easily from her mind and her eyes still swept an assembled drawing-roomful with the hope of seeing that black, craven hair and the hazel eyes that twinkled. She tried again with Lola.

"Drake plays a much better game than Donny. Let's have another evening and include him."

"You must have a sneaky feeling for him, darling. Drake's nothing to quote Cubertson about."

And that was that. It was with this rebuff to her maneuvers that she actually drew in her feelers and resignedly abandoned her efforts to get in touch with Drake. With this definite withdrawal she knew a dreariness and lack of anticipation as to what life might hold for her.

Emerging from her English literature course one evening she stepped out into a driving sleet. Icy wind sent it slanting down like a curtain of so much liquid steel. It pressed her skirt back against her legs and sent cutting particles into her face. Impossible to hold up an umbrella and even more impossible to find a taxi. She made her way down to Riverside Drive and took a bus that went east at One Hundred and Tenth Street. In the bus she took out her vanity case and peered at herself in the small mirror. She wanted to laugh out loud. Wet streaks of hair were plastered to her cheeks, looking like strings of melted copper wire. Her hat had somehow changed shape and the fur of her collar looked like a drowned cat. Her cheeks were stung crimson like splashes of cheap rouge and her nose and forehead were shining and wet.

"If some one like Roland Wainwright could see me now, the well-groomed Venice Muir!" She grinned.

"Fare, miss." She started, to meet the conductor's impatient gaze and outstretched hand bearing the small contraption for ten cent pieces. At Eightieth Street she got out and scuttled across Fifth Avenue, the wind pressing her clothes back against her as urgently as on One Hundred and Sixteenth Street, the sleet still as persistently cutting. Stepping up the curb she slipped and fell. She sat in a small puddle of slush and, clambering to her feet, realized that if she was a spectacle before she was grotesque now. Running down towards Madison Avenue, her head lowered to avoid the sharp sleet, she bumped into Drake Farrelly.

About New York

By William Gaines

New York—Harry Kemp, the famous tramp, poet and novelist, manages to give himself adequate publicity through his books but he does balk at interviews.

His publishers wanted to give his latest work a push, however, to they arranged for six sittings with newspaper and periodical representatives.

Kemp stuttered through the first, then ran out on all the others. Storming into his publisher's office, he shouted that this business of going through a third degree had incapacitated him for a week, so far as creative thought was concerned!

Nostalgic Exile?

At a newsstand where I sometimes stop to buy out-of-town papers, a man of sombre visage, white of hair and wearing a funeral black overcoat and hat, inquired of the dealer if he had a paper published in a small Minnesota town.

I heard the dealer say: "No, sir, we have never started carrying it. No other calls for it. But you know I can get it for you if you want me to."

The man strode slowly away, his head bowed as if in deep thought. The sort of solitary, melancholy figure that haunts the parks and bookshops here. The dealer turned to me with a sigh:

"Funny fellow, that. About every two or three months in the last couple of years he has come here, asking for that paper. Every time I've told him that we didn't keep it. When he kept on coming I told him I'd order the paper for him if he'd take it regular. But he'd just say, 'Oh, never mind.'"

"How do you figure a guy like that, huh?" A wee kitten, eyes barely open, negotiated the top step of a stairway from a shop basement. It took its seat on the Seventh Avenue sidewalk for a first sight of an amazing and meaningless world of bustle.

Two women stopped to coo and goo over this moth in the hurricane path. A little girl ran from the shop and grabbed the kitten, saying, "That's mine."

Four Italians in rude garb stood before a Park Avenue automobile salon, attracted by an exhibition of fine cars made in their native land.

Their excited talk was wholly unintelligible to other window gazers, but their gestures and chest-swelling made it plain that they were proud.

Read The Bible With Us Daily

My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me? why art thou so far from helping me, and from the words of my roaring?
O my God, I cry in the daytime, but thou hearest not; and in the night session, and am not silent.
But thou art holy, O thou that inhabitest the praises of Israel.
Our fathers trusted in thee: they trusted, and thou didst deliver them.
They cried unto thee, and were delivered: they trusted in thee, and were not confounded.
But I am a worm, and no man; a reproach of men, and despised of the people.
All they that see me laugh me to scorn: they shoot out the lip, they shake the head, saying,
He trusted on the Lord that he would deliver him: let him deliver him, seeing he delighted in him.
But thou art he that took me out of the womb: thou didst make me hope when I was upon my mother's breasts.
I was cast upon thee from the womb: thou art my God from my mother's belly.
Be not far from me: for trouble is near, for there is none to help.
Psalm 22:1-11.

HISTORY OF ADAMS COUNTY
A Chronological Review Of Things That Have Gone Before, And The Trials And Tribulations Of Our Ancestors, As Published Serially For The Benefit Of Gettysburg Times' Readers.

Style of the Centinel
John Bender announces that he will not act longer as justice of the peace, since he had learned he "would not be fined for refusing to act." March 18 issue has letter list. James Price, P. M. The letters are to "John Crawford, South Mountain, care Robert Scott, inn-keeper, Nicholson's Gap; Moses Davis, Francis Hill, Isaac Mott, Robert Simpson." Matthew Longwell offers his frame house and lot in Gettysburg for sale.

James Gettys, lieutenant-colonel of Twentieth Regiment, gives notice to officers. March 27 Commissioners R. McIlhenny and Jacob Grene-meyer give notice to pay ground rent for lots in Gettysburg to John Murphy. April 15 Dr. Samuel Agnew's card as a physician appears, and James Cobean had just rented and opened to the public Gettys Inn. August 19, 1801, the four columns of the first page are filled with a communication signed "Old Maid," discussing celibacy. Then follows an address of two columns "To the Republicans of Adams County," by "Edomite." Then the third communication follows, a little over a column. There are yet no editorials in the paper.

The paper reached its Vol. II, No. 1, December 2, 1801. The total of its "ads" for this issue are: James Duncan, register; Samuel Brown and William Gilliland, executors for Alexander Brown (deceased), and James McCreary and John Agnew, executors for James Agnew (deceased), of Liberty township; David Moore, administrator of Margaret Douglass, of Cumberland, and Michael Neuman (Newman), "Tanning & Currying" in Benjamin Beubach's tannery.

Editorials Missing
In running over the first two years of the files of the "Centinel" the modern newspaper man, or reader, would be impressed with the absence of editorial or local matter, and the many communications, political, religious and personal, and the extreme length of the communications. The editor invited everybody to say their say in his paper, and everybody, it seems, responded at length. When the paper had been going about six months these communications poured in, and even the editor, who took a lively hand, especially with Dr. William Crawford, wrote as a contributor under an assumed title for some time. Mr. Harper's paper evidently was responsive to the public wants and sentiments of his day; that is in its make up and matter. The editor himself was a federalist, and he hated Jefferson cordially, and this dislike grew as did Jefferson become more and more the idol of the republican democrats. Thus we are furnished with a splendid view of the people of that day, because the people wrote and exploited themselves in their county paper. The majority of Harper's and Dr. Crawford's papers, fired at each other, were simply bitter personal attacks, in which the private lives and morals were exposed "ad nauseam," when at the same time the law of the commonwealth was very severe against Sabbath breaking and profanity.

In the issue of September 8, 1802, A. Russell has a communication contributed to the Harper-Crawford controversy, in which is the following: "Dr. William Crawford (now a junior judge) did in my presence and in the presence of many other gentlemen, on the 28th of March, 1793, swear seven profane oaths by the name of God, for which a conviction and adjudication stands on by docket."

The total amount of revenue collected in 1800 was $4,466.34. April 18, 1804, is a communication from Dr. Samuel Agnew about cowpox. It ably combats the public prejudice against vaccination.

Form Changed
In May, 1805, the paper was changed to magazine form with a title page, and for the first time a large display German text letter head. In this issue John Clark advertises a valuable grist-mill, three miles from Gettysburg. William McPherson offers $20 for an escaped slave. Davis advertises his chair factory, and "Pay up," says William Merritt, as "I am going to remove from the county."

A letter dated January 29, 1806, answers certain questions as to the price of farm lands in this part of Pennsylvania, and says "lands are worth from $2½ to $12 an acre."

The county commissioners made their annual statement from the 3d day of February, 1805, to the 31st of January, 1806. The total revenue of the county was $7,095.49. This included $1,769.82, balance on hand; $1,626, outstanding tax collected, and $199, ground rent for town lots.

TODAY'S TALK
By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS
Author of "You Can," "Us," "Just Among Friends."

LESS DIFFICULT
"It is the duty of government," once said William E. Gladstone, "to make it easy for the people to do right, and difficult to do wrong."

Life is valuable to each of us only as we are able to make it less difficult for others. It is a privilege of the more fortunate to smooth the pathway of the less fortunate.

Our friends become endeared to us the more we are able to make them feel that their lives are intermeshing ours, and that a communion of thought is common to us all. If we cannot serve our friend, add to his happiness, unburden his weight of work or worry, then we are missing out upon one of the happiest of opportunities.

If we are able to keep before us at all times the glorious idea of contributing, we need have no worry as to our own happiness, because to give out is always paramount to taking in—enriching our own life and experience by enlarging that of some one else.

Much is said against this "machine age" of ours, but it has contributed more than the fast living people of this age realize. Eventually it will mean better living conditions, shorter hours of labor, and a more decent chance for all—especially for those whose chance heretofore has seemed slim indeed.

A five hour day, for instance, would mean more sunlight for the worker, happier family ties, and better trained minds to every member of the race. Play would come into its own—and life would be less difficult.

No greater thrill is possible to anyone, who understands joy, than that of seeing the smile of appreciation upon the face of a friend.

When we take the love that we have nurtured in our own heart, and pour it lavishly into the heart of our friend, we feel that we have enriched all life—as we have!

At the death of a really great man, the thing that is most interesting and inspiring is a recitation of the things he did to make others happy—of the things that he sought to improve—his contribution toward making life more pleasant and less difficult.

Take the life of Pasteur, for instance. He not only made life less dangerous, but he made it possible for untold millions to inherit life and thus, in turn, to contribute to the sum total of happiness in the world.

Just Folks

SELF-EXAMINATION
So fair the past has been, now it has gone
I strangely think it vain to journey on.
It seems to me, bemoaning pleasures,
There is no future splendor to be known.

And yet time was those lost joys I deplore
Comprised the future that I labored for.
I viewed the world without too many fears,
Nor was I then afraid to trust the years.

I faced tomorrow, hoping it would be
A day that might bring happiness to me.
Came all those joys o'er which in grief I bow.
Then shall I fear to face the future now?

Once I had faith in every time of doubt,
Why then do I walk dolefully about,
Discouraged by the cold winds and the rain,
Afraid the sun will never shine again?

BEWARE THE COUGH OR COLD THAT HANGS ON

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth. Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs. Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

Stop Night Coughing

Night coughing is almost always caused by an irritated, inflamed throat; so is almost all coughing. Ordinary cough syrups do not reach these conditions, but Thoxine, a prescription exclusively for throat troubles, does. It relieves the irritation and the cough stops within 15 minutes. And Thoxine goes further too. It eliminates the internal cause which many times develops into serious illness.

A swallow of Thoxine before retiring absolutely prevents night coughing and insures a good night's sleep. It gives the same speedy relief for sore throat too. It contains no chloroform or other harmful drugs and children like it. Relief is guaranteed within 15 minutes or money back. 35c., 60c. and $1.00 bottles. Sold by People's Drug Store and all other good drug stores.
